Nancy thanks for the opportunity to provide some feedback on tools to tell the story of restoration success.

I just have one suggestion, of one tool that I think tells the story clearly.....photo monitoring.....it works for a lot of things....but I am speaking specifically to flow restoration.....I believe nothing can communicate the effectiveness of stream flow restoration than two side by side photos from the same location....one photo of a dry stream full of rocks and right next to it the contrasting photo .....a stream full of water... its easy, it is a powerful image and it sends a clear message of the benefits realized.

Thanks much,
